

Sinclair
Broadcasting's
decision to force
their stations to air an anti-Kerry
documentary days
before the election
is a clear example
of the dangers of media consolidation.

Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. They are not doing so.

It is clear that we
no longer have
"free" speech.
Instead, we now have speech to the highest bidder--or
the highest donor--which appears to be the
Fox/Sinclair
conglomerate. This proposed attack on John Kerry must be identified as an in-kind donation to the Bush campaign.
And, frankly, I feel that these stations'
license to broadcast
should be removed.
It is a clear
violation of a public trust.
